FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Funding opportunities in computational archaeology and national security.

Significant funding is available for focused 72 hour research engagements in computational archaeology, with a strong national security focus.

Interested parties should have experience with complexity theory, programming languages, and cryptography.

You will be a part of one of many interdisciplinary teams, working together with researchers from the Miskatonic University Department of Archaeology between Friday 7 August 2015 at 12:00 UTC and Monday 10 August 2015 at 12:00 UTC.

By reading this text you have agreed to our Top Secret non-disclosure agreement and your background check, conducted by GCHQ, is underway.

Full details on the research engagement, called "Aleister", will be made available on icfpcontest.org at the appropriate time.
